Mary lit a candle and put on her slippers. Quietly, she walked out to the hall. Misselthwaite Manor was a very big mansion, with many rooms and (A) hallways. It was easy to get lost. But the sound of crying guided her through the maze of hallways. After a while, she came to a door. Carefully, she pushed the door open.

A small boy was sitting on a bed in the room.

"Who are you?" the boy asked. "Are you a ghost?"

"No, I am not," answered Mary. "Are you?"

The boy looked at her for a few seconds. His eyes were gray and seemed too big for his face. He was thin and looked weak. Finally, he said. "No, I am Colin Craven."

"Mr. Craven is my uncle!" said Mary. "He sent for me to live here when my parents died. But no one told me he had a son."

"My father doesn't like to talk about me," said Colin. "He hates me."

"Why on earth would he do that?" asked Mary.

"My mother died when I was born. I think he blames me for that. I am also very ill all the time. I will probably not live very long."

(19-20) Read and choose the correct answers.

It was Christmas Eve, and Ebenezer Scrooge was sitting in his house. It was very cold, but Scrooge only made a small fire. A large fire meant using more wood. Wood cost money. Now, Scrooge was not poor. In fact, he had a lot of money. But Scrooge hated to spend any more money than was absolutely necessary. So he sat quite close to his little fire in his big house and had his supper.

Suddenly, Scrooge heard a strange noise. It sounded like the door to his basement had opened with a bang. He could hear something heavy dragging along the floor. The sound came closer and closer. The door to the living room opened. There was a ghost standing there! It was his former business partner, Jacob Marley!

Scrooge was afraid, but he was unsure. He didn't believe in ghosts.

"Why have you come here?" asked Scrooge.

"Every man must wander after he dies," said the ghost. "We visit the people we knew. We must learn about the good things we should have done during our lives."

"But you died seven years ago," said Scrooge. "Have you been traveling all that time?"

Marley's voice sounded very sad. "I missed many opportunities to do good. There are many people I should have helped but did not. _____, I have visited you many times, but you did not see me."

19. Which expression is appropriate in the blank?

- |              |                 |

| ③ Whatsoever | ④ Unfortunately |

20. Which of the following is true?

- ① Scrooge used to be very rich.
- ② This event happened on New Year's Day.
- ③ Marley regrets missing many opportunities to do good.
- ④ The chain Scrooge is making is much shorter than Marley's.

(21-22) Read and choose the correct answers.

One night, a swallow was late flying south for the coming winter. The swallow was in a hurry, but he had to rest _____ the night. He decided to rest at the feet of a beautiful statue in a big city.

The swallow was almost asleep when a big drop of water fell on him.

"That's strange," he thought. "There are no clouds in the sky!"

Then, two more drops fell. He looked up and saw that the statue was crying!

"Little swallow, will you help me?" asked the prince. "There are many poor people in my city who need help. But I cannot move."

"What can I do?"

"Take the ruby from my sword and give (A) it to a mother. Her boy is sick and needs medicine."

The swallow flew to the mother and dropped the ruby beside her. When the swallow returned, he felt warm.

"You feel warm because you did a good deed," said the prince. "Will you stay with me one more night? There are more people who need help."

"I am late _____ my trip to Egypt," said the swallow. "But I will stay."
